Recalls Hearing Sir John A. Macdonald On Garbutt's Hill

VISITOR LEFT NEWMARKET 60 YEARS AGO TO SEEK FORTUNE

VISITS CEMETERY

John Meegan of New York City visited Newmarket yesterday. Mr. Meegan was born in Newmarket, son of Mary King and Thomas Meegan, and left here when he was 22 years old.

One old friend whom Mr. Meegan visited was Mrs. Frederick Murray, north Main St.

His mother died when she was 23, and she had a sister who lived to be 103. Both are in Newmarket cemetery. His father too is in Newmarket cemetery. Mr. Meegan made a pilgrimage to the cemetery.

Mr. Meegan went to Toronto first, and learned watch-case making. He then went into brass-finishing. He even served as a waiter in Toronto restaurants and on boats running between Montreal and Toronto.

"I have worked in 25 different cities," he told The Era.

He has been in New York since 1883, where he has worked on finishing caskets.

He married Lucy Hollingshead, born in Newmarket, in Chicago. He had met her in Toronto.

He has three children, two daughters and a boy. The boy married a New York belle.

Mr. Meegan remembers hearing Sir John A. Macdonald speak on Garbutt's Hill. Mr. Meegan attended the outdoor meeting with Tom Halligan, who was raised by a family named Robinson.

"Tom was on a British warship for five years and went to Sydney, Australia, the last I heard of him," said Mr. Meegan.

Mr. Meegan is 82 years old. He is an old friend of "Billy" O'Halloran, who was also born here.

Mr. Meegan is a regular visitor to Newmarket and expressed sorrow when told of the tragic death a year ago of his old friend, George Muir.

REGULAR TAX SALES URGED FOR FUTURE

COMPROMISES MADE WITH TWO CITIZENS BY TOWN COUNCIL

COUNCIL DISAGREES

Compromise settlements were made with two citizens against whom the town had claims for arrears of taxes, at a town council meeting Tuesday evening.

"These two cases are an illustration of the bad effect of not having a regular tax sale," said Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd. "When I became mayor I asked Mr. Matthews why there was so much arrears accumulated. He said it was because intercession was made by members of the council whenever an attempt was made to collect. I told him to go ahead and collect and there would be no more interference. And there has been no interference. That is the fair way. Let the law take its course."

There is a tax sale advertised for Sept. 6, with the list becoming steadily less as property-owners settle the claims.

She bought a property in 1929 without knowing the current year's taxes of $57 were unpaid, and she was never informed of the arrears until this year, when she received a bill for the taxes for the one year with 11 years' penalties of $44, Mrs. Albert Trivett told the council. She offered to pay three years' penalties.

"Mrs. Trivett bought the property from Fred L. Lundy (not the reeve) in May, 1929, and she was allowed in the purchase price for Mr. Lundy's share of the year's taxes," said Mr. Matthews. "We had no way of knowing who owed the money. We kept sending the bill to Mr. Lundy. We have just found out that Mrs. Trivett had acquired the property from Mr. Lundy. Taxes in towns are listed alphabetically, not under properties. Mrs. Trivett failed to inform us of the transfer of the property."

"I think a certain amount of fault lies with the clerk's office," said Reeve F. A. Lundy, who said that he favored making a concession to Mrs. Trivett but that the finance committee had out-voted him.

Mr. Matthews stated that the system was such that the clerk's office couldn't transfer the arrears to a new owner unless notified of the sale.

By a majority vote, the council agreed to accept in settlement three years' penalties and the cost of advertising the property this year in the Ontario Gazette.

In another case the council accepted, on recommendation of the finance committee, $75.98 from Elgin Perrin, representing taxes for 1925 and 1926, and penalties to 1931.

A cheque for this amount was received from K. M. R. Stiver as solicitor for Mr. Perrin.

Mr. Matthews stated that Mr. Perrin had purchased the property in ignorance of the arrears and through an oversight had not been informed of them.

TELLS WHY HE HAS CENSURED DRAW TICKETS

REV. DR. D. MCINTYRE PREACHES FAREWELL SERMONS

SAYS GOODBYE

In his farewell sermon at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church last Sunday Rev. Dr. D. McIntyre defended the unpopular course he had pursued while in Newmarket in his condemnation of tickets of chance as a means of raising money and declared his belief that to follow such a course is to reject the high values of life for low values.

Dr. McIntyre, in closing his ministry in Newmarket, gave farewell addresses to the public, to his own congregation and to Pine Orchard.

Before beginning his sermon to the public he spoke as follows: "Every pastor has a public as well as a congregational responsibility. I have always been conscious of this responsibility and presented my views relative to the moral and spiritual interests of the community without fear or favor."

"I have clashed with the sentiment of the town for over 12 years, for ignoring and repudiating the high values of life and substituting for them low values. Esau did that when he sold his birthright for a mess of pottage and suffered all his life as a consequence."

"Newmarket has done the same thing by trading the morals of the community in raising money for its organizations in selling chance tickets. Trading high values for low values is shortsighted business. If the public refuse to face facts and continue this practice, the worthwhile elements of civilization will soon be a thing of the past. Hitler is doing nothing worse than ignoring and repudiating the high values of national life."

"When people will deliberately use the resources of civilization, such as commerce, education, culture and religion, to destroy the sensitive qualities of the heart, there is something wrong with their mental or moral capacity. Sodom was destroyed for (Page 3, Col. 5)

York Rangers Will Train Locally Men Joining Ere Aug. 15

"I am only too delighted to have a militia company in Newmarket," Major-General Alexander, commanding officer of Military District No. 2 at Toronto, told The Era by telephone this afternoon.

Major-General Alexander was asked if the Queen's York Rangers were to go ahead with organization of a militia company to be trained in Newmarket.

"I will do all I can to help," he declared, "as soon as one or two details are straightened out. The thing the militia can do is to give an opportunity to young men to train themselves for the defence of their country."

"Whatever machinery we can set up there for that purpose is the right thing to do. If the citizens themselves and the York Rangers would like a company there I will certainly approve of it."

"There are one or two questions as to accommodation to be settled, but whatever may be done to establish a militia company there receives my complete support."

Queen's York Rangers will form a non-permanent militia company in Newmarket.

The 1st Battalion of the Queen's York Rangers are recruiting men between the ages of 18 and 45 in Newmarket and vicinity to form a non-permanent militia company as part of the 1st Battalion.

Civic authorities have advocated the training of young men in the district in Newmarket and representations have been made in the past for such training. It has been felt by the civic authorities that training could be done better in Newmarket instead of having the men in the district going to Toronto two nights a week to drill.

Some two weeks ago the Irish Regiment of Canada, 2nd Battalion, started some recruiting in Aurora and Newmarket through L. J. Heagerty, director of St. John's aviation school, here in Newmarket.

Mr. Heagerty felt that it was most desirable to have a militia company in Newmarket as well as Aurora to facilitate the training of young men throughout North York.

A large number of young men applied to Mr. Heagerty for enlistment in the Irish Regiment of Canada.

Mr. Heagerty, after a conference with Major-General Alexander, commanding officer, Military District No. 2, today, in which he was advised that it had been decided to have the Queen's York Rangers establish units in Newmarket and North York, stated that he felt, as the civic authorities in Newmarket do, that some battalion should set up the proper machinery here and that in view of the fact that the Queen's York Rangers were doing so he would recommend to all men who applied for enlistment in the Irish Regiment that they join the Queen's York Rangers.

Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd, on being interviewed today, said he is delighted that Newmarket will be used as a militia training centre for the young men in North York. He stated that he and members of the council have strongly advocated Newmarket as a training centre and that the town would turn over its complete facilities to the Queen's York Rangers.

"The reason is the convenience," said Dr. Boyd. "We will give every assistance."

Queen's York Rangers announced today that they will establish permanent headquarters at Newmarket and Aurora for the training of men enlisting from the northern part of the county.

This unit belongs to the non-permanent active militia, and men enlisting are not liable for overseas service without enlistment. On the other hand, it is understood that men enlisting in this or any militia unit, to train two nights a week, will not be liable under the compulsory training plan.

Enlistments in the militia will not be accepted after Aug. 15, when the compulsory training plan goes into effect.

Capt. D. O. Mungovan, Newmarket, an officer of this machine-gun unit, was in town today to arrange announcement of this move on the part of his regiment.

The regiment has 750 men in camp at Niagara-on-the-Lake, all new men, who have made a wonderful impression on the camp authorities, he stated, and on their return the Newmarket platoon of 36 men will parade up Main St. this Saturday afternoon at 3.30 p.m.

Other officers from Newmarket in camp are Lieut. R. B. Canham and Lieut. Dr. J. G. Cock, who is acting as a medical officer.

The Newmarket platoon will drill at the Newmarket market square next Wednesday evening at 8 p.m., and new recruits will be welcomed.

Goldshirts Swamp Girls From Unionville By 14-3

Newmarket girls met Unionville at the local ball park last Wednesday night and swamped them by a score of 14-3.

Marjorie McCarnan, backed by some nice fielding, held Unionville well in check, while the locals were piling up the runs. Starting the first inning with a burst of five runs, the girls were never headed.

Two home runs boomed off their bats and in the first and fourth innings Webster's girls batted right through their lineup and came out with a total of 11 runs for the two innings. Unionville never threatened and only scored in the fifth and sixth, the last run being a homer deep into right field. Marjorie McCarnan was easily the star of the game, with her steady pitching. She also collected a couple of good solid hits. Beckett on second base and Mary Osborne on third fielded several hard-hit balls perfectly, Unionville never getting a chance to get started. Sabiston, in left field for the visitors, was their star as she picked off several hard-liners for a perfect fielding effort, and also collected one of her team's hits.

P. J. TOD RETIRES AS MONTREAL MANAGER

P. J. Tod, bank manager here since 1932, retires from service on Aug. 31. Mr. Tod has been in the Bank of Montreal since 1906. He will continue to reside in Newmarket.

R. D. Brown, a banker of nearly 30 years' experience, has been appointed by the Bank of Montreal to take charge of their local office in succession to P. J. Tod, who will shortly be going on leave prior to retiring on pension.

Mr. Brown entered upon his banking career when he joined the staff of the Merchants Bank of Canada at his native town of Portage la Prairie in 1911. This bank was later amalgamated with the Bank of Montreal. His first banking appointment came in 1924 when he was appointed accountant at Wainwright, Alta.

Three years later saw him promoted to the management of the bank's office at Donald, a position he held for five years. Subsequently he has held managements at Acme for two years and at Teeswater for six years. It is from this latter branch that he comes to take up his most recent appointment to Newmarket.

Mr. Brown is an ex-service man, having seen overseas service during the last war with Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry. His chief recreations are bowling, golf and tennis.

EXPENSIVE ADVERTISING

An out-of-town car coming up Main St. on Tuesday had to pass, on the hill just south of The Era office, between a truck parked on one side and a car parked on the other side. The driver of the car was a young woman and in trying to keep to her side of the narrow passage-way left the fender of her fine-looking car caught on the back-wheel hub of the truck. The result was that the fender was mutilated. The young woman was not at fault. She had driven with reasonable skill, but not with sufficient skill to calculate the hair-breadth margins of our Main St.

The party was delayed. The car was held up for repairs. A garage and probably a restaurant got a little business that they would have missed otherwise, but Newmarket got a lot of poor advertising. There was no need for that mishap, which is typical of hundreds which occur in the course of a year along Main St. Perhaps we shouldn't say "typical," for usually there are two cars with damaged fenders. There is no need for Main St. to be so narrow, particularly up Main St. hill. The sidewalk in this section is more than wide enough and could be cut down easily to allow more room for motor traffic. The cost would be little, and would soon be equalled by the saving in damage to cars of our own citizens.

Newmarket with its narrow Main St. is misrepresented as an old-fashioned town. Newmarket can be as modern as any town, but there is only one way to be modern and that is by changing with the times.

NATIONAL EFFICIENCY

Apparently we missed the report in the daily press, or possibly the daily press did the missing, but, according to a church paper, a representative church deputation urged on the dominion government recently prohibition of the use of alcoholic liquor "for the duration." That would be a radical step in view of the comparatively recent change of most Canadian provinces from the liquor prohibition of the last war to systems of so-called government control. Two exceptions are Quebec, which we believe never had prohibition, and Prince Edward Island, which recently re-voted itself dry.

However, if put forward as a war sacrifice, we think that a measure of partial prohibition would meet with a favorable reception. It would need to be accompanied by an aggressive industrial program which would absorb the men thrown out of employment and make those who were giving up part or all of their alcoholic beverages feel that the country was really making use of the labor and money saved. Canada is still a long way from a "total" effort. Men and women are idle, plants are idle or idling, and there is no pinch of taxation.

The present is a wonderful time for reform. In time of peace, there was unemployment, duplication, waste, extravagance, want, midst plenty and everybody thought it was too bad, but the government could not step in and make the wheels turn, because that would be socialism. In time of war, however, the population is nearly unanimous in admitting the right of the government to set things right. In fact, there is a demand for state control. People have seen what state socialism has done for bankrupt Germany, and they want similar efficiency in Canada. There is a wonderful opportunity for public leaders with energy and vision.

Our leaders show enough foresight to forecast depression after this war is over, but not enough to avoid it. If Germany were to win the war there would be no depression in Germany. The state would keep everybody working and the cessation of war would mark the beginning of a gradual upward movement in the German standard of living. But Canada and her allies will win this war eventually, and then Canada will turn the men out of her armies and her factories to idle through another depression.

It could be otherwise. Canada could take enough out of Germany's notebook to increase tremendously Canada's industrial effort at the present time and to keep the wheels turning after the war is won. Canada and her allies must beat Germany with 20th century economic weapons, not with the 19th century's laissez-faire, and, having learned in war-time what national planning can do, Canada can go on after the war to a tremendous development.

Yes, Canada could even reduce the use of alcoholic liquor tremendously, as Germany has done, with an appeal to patriotism. And with aggressive leadership, Canada could keep the use of liquor to a minimum, after the war is over, as part of a national program of construction and nation-building. It will be interesting to see what the government does. Roman Catholic and Protestant churches and the Salvation Army joined in the request for prohibition just made at Ottawa.

WILL THERE BE POST-WAR DEPRESSION?

In the course of the town council meeting on Tuesday evening the question came up incidentally whether it would be to the advantage of the town to have munitions or other war-purpose factories established here. One view was that when the war is over, the town would be left with a large number of unemployed workers and in the event of another depression the town would have a heavy financial burden. Another view is that if Newmarket got the extra building accommodation now, there would be post-war industries which would occupy it.

The question probably resolves itself into whether or not there will be a post-war depression. In our opinion, there need not be, but, also in our opinion, there will be. Our government is not taking steps to avoid post-war depression. This year Canada is budgeting for a deficit of perhaps $600,000,000. We are not paying for the war as we go. We are living easily and paying tomorrow. We are not even working as hard as we could.

Because we are not paying as we go there is not one of us who has any true conception of the tremendous sums we are spending on war. There are only two ways of getting rid of a debt. One is by work and the other is by repudiation. In other words, Canada can pay off the tremendous sums she is expending on war by putting all citizens to work, or she can pay them off with inflationary schemes. If we can't pay our war debt now while millions of dollars are being spent in this country, how can we pay it after the war when reaction and depression set in? when thousands of employables are forced to sit around and do nothing?

Newmarket's municipal finances have been improving as fast as provincial and now federal finances have been deteriorating. The best way for Newmarket to saddle itself with an unbearable share of provincial extravagance of the last few years and of the colossal federal war debt, and the depression which economists forecast, is to bring a war industry to Newmarket. If the government should give war business to Newmarket's present industries, or select Newmarket as the site of a war plant, that would be one thing, but for Newmarket to go out looking for a new war plant, which would otherwise be located elsewhere, would be shortsighted. It would be a good way to throw away the benefits of conservative municipal financing in the last few years.

WHAT IS CAMP BORDEN WORTH TO BARRIE?

The Barrie Examiner says it is absurd to say that Barrie benefits to the extent of $10,000 a day from the proximity of Camp Borden. It sounds a little steep to us too. Here is an editorial from the Examiner: "Lieut.-Col. Lambert, in his address at Sunday night's meeting in Queen's Park intimated rather plainly that the soldiers from Camp Borden have not received the attention they deserve from the citizens of Barrie, considering the amount of business they bring to this town."

"From his remarks it is evident that Col. Lambert is not well informed as to what Barrie is doing for the comfort of the soldiers. Comparatively, we feel sure it is quite equal to Toronto's contribution when the wealth and population of the two places are taken into consideration."

"Barrie is very appreciative of the business derived from Camp Borden, though it is most absurd to suggest that $1 a day comes into this town from each of the 10,000 to 12,000 soldiers at the camp."

"The camp's financial value to the town was, however, not the thought which motivated the various activities which have been carried on for the benefit of the soldiers. What has been done has been prompted solely by a desire to show some recognition of the brave men who have placed their services at the disposal of our country for our protection. We realize that anything we can do for them is inadequate."

"Even though we do not admit that Col. Lambert's criticism is justified, let us hope that his words may have a stimulating effect so that all the citizens will feel a desire to make our relationships with the soldiers more helpful through personal contact and in other ways."

FEDERAL UNION

The proposal by the Churchill government that the British and French empires should be unified came upon Canadians as a bolt from the blue. In Britain, however, ever since the war started there has been a great deal of newspaper discussion of war aims, and one of the most popular proposals was that after the war the world's democracies should enter a federal union, with one army, one navy and no dividing customs tariffs. No doubt the Churchill government's proposal was based on this realization that after the war is over the nations will have to do something radically different to avoid ever-more-serious conflicts.

STILL AN UNSETTLED QUESTION

All municipal councils should make arrangements to submit to the public, at the municipal elections this winter, the question whether the councils elected are to continue in office two years or one year. Unless the public votes on this question the councils will stay in office two years. By not submitting this question to the people the councils practically take it upon themselves to decide that the new council term shall be for two years. The public can, of course, sign a petition to the council to have the question submitted to the voters, but that is not likely to happen. The simple way would be for the council to put the question before the public and let the people decide.

GOLDEN HARVEST

Northern York farmers are reaping wonderful grain crops this year. The fields have been wonderful to look at, and probably threshing will reveal high yields.

RIDING LESSONS

The Georgetown Herald tells how that newspaper and several of the town's business men were "taken for a ride" on a proposed map of Georgetown. Perhaps that wouldn't be a long ride. The map is still a dream and the editor is going to have the man who did the deed arrested.

SOUNDS FAMILIAR

The heading, "National Stock Taking Needs National Registration," on the dominion government's advertising last week is reminiscent of the advertising a few months ago, "A Nation at War Needs a National Government."

The Common Round

VEXED QUESTION

By Isabel Inglis Colville

For perhaps 25 years, minus the four years of the first great war, I have been an enthusiastic reader of the "Saturday Evening Post."

Now please do not let that confession make you exclaim in disgust, "oh, she reads American magazines and forgets that we have just as good in Canada."

There are eight Canadian magazines come into our home and only four published in the United States, and one of these latter is a music magazine, which is a text book for many a music teacher or music lover.

But, to return to our starting point, the Post, since the present war started, and before I had heard or read anything of the opposition to its editorials and some of its articles were raising in Canadian readers, these same editorials and articles began to seem to me the wrong way.

The editorials referred every statement made by British, American or Canadian speakers or writers, that "Britain's navy was America's first line of defence." It said that if the various weapons stored in United States arsenals from the last war, were obsolete, they would be of no use to the Allies' need, if they WERE good enough to be of use to Britain, then they were also good enough for the U.S.A., which needed arms and more arms for its own defence.

Then, there were articles which stressed the power and might of Germany, articles about her leaders and their wonderful war machine, and, although these articles did not exalt the characters of these men, they certainly gave the impression that the power they wielded would not leave Britain much ground to stand on.

Now, of course, a free press is one of our deeply cherished democratic institutions, alike in British and American lands, but usually a free press, in a NEUTRAL country, gives each side a chance to speak.

I do not think that any readers of the Post can point to many articles telling of the strength and decency of any British leader and it was this lack of fair play which prompted me to write to the editor of The Post and ask him the why and wherefore of the same.

I received a very prompt and courteous, but not particularly enlightening reply, from which I quote the following paragraphs:

"We think you will agree that never, even by indirection, has the Post presumed to advise Canada what she should do or to criticize what she has done. These are Canada's problems and none of our business. But the welfare of the United States is as much our concern as is the welfare of the Dominion the concern of good Canadians."

"We have no dislike, let alone hatred, of Great Britain and in any contest between her and Nazi Germany our sympathies are 100% with England, yet we do not see England through Canadian eyes."

Since I wrote as a British subject and in the interest of fair play, this letter didn't seem to touch the spot. The Post is read in Britain, in her dominions and her colonies, and what gets me is, if the editor is 100% for England against Germany, why a little of that sympathy doesn't seep into the pages of what is really a great magazine.

I am loath to discontinue reading it, for in it I get much I cannot get any place else—biographies and autobiographies especially, but I am wondering if I lack patriotism by continuing to take it.

My readers have been very kind about letting me know what they thought about various things I have written. I wish they'd be equally frank about this.

As I said before, it's the lack of balance between the articles regarding the two sides of the great struggle.

To me, this seems a time when those who sympathize with Britain's cause should be vocal, for sympathy can sometimes harden resolution into great strength.

HATTIE NUTHATCH GETS A SHAKING UP

BY RUTH DINGMAN HEBB

"How I wish that Black-billed Cuckoo would shut up," murmured Mrs. Rob Robin to Hattie, the White-breasted Nuthatch.

Mrs. Robin was enjoying some June berries in a small tree on the edge of the woods by the lake, while the Nuthatch was energetically climbing up and down a Basswood tree nearby.

"Yes, I quite agree with you," Hattie replied. "I was quite startled to hear him calling 'grrr, grrr,' in the middle of the night last night. In fact, it woke me up in the middle of a wonderful dream about a tree I had just discovered, which was simply crawling with juicy, plump insects. I was quite annoyed."

"Now children," Mrs. Rob interrupted to speak firmly to two young Robins who were fluttering excitedly among the branches of the big Juneberry bush and snatching greedily at the berries. "Mrs. Veery and I were here first and we will be able to finish up the rest of the fruit on this tree without anyone else's help. Remember our rule, the early bird gets the worm and the late bird can't expect to chisel in on the spoils, after someone else has discovered the treasure. You two run along and hunt for some other place to have lunch. Good heavens—what in the world was that?"

"Mercy me!" ejaculated Mrs. Nuthatch. She had had to jump aside extremely suddenly as two young Red Squirrels, going about a mile a minute, landed on her tree from another big one. One chased the other down the trunk and racing like two red bullets, they went on to another tree. They kept up an angry screaming chatter as they continued on their mad chase.

"Why, they nearly knocked me off my tree-trunk," she spluttered. "The nerve of it. I'm all in a flutter—only my great agility and skill when I jumped aside saved me from being hurt."

"You poor dear," sympathized Mrs. Robin. "You look all shaken up. Is there anything I can do? Those Squirrels are terribly rude and rough. The Chipmunks are bad enough, scurrying around all the time—but the Squirrels are just impossible."

"I'm afraid I've bruised one of my toes," complained Mrs. Nuthatch. "I'll certainly give them a piece of my mind, when they come back."

"Don't give them too big a piece, you couldn't spare it, my dear," called a raucous voice from above her, and Hattie looked up indignantly to see Handsome, the Blue Jay, grinning down at her.

"Keep away from these Juneberries," Mrs. Robin warned her severely. "Mrs. Veery and I don't care to have anyone else in this tree, thank you. She is so polite she wouldn't mention it—but I don't mind telling you."

"Well, I'll see if I can find another bush," said Handsome, "but if not, I may be back. You can't scare me, you know." He flew away, screaming at the top of his lungs.

"Listen to that young Red-eyed Vireo," Mrs. Veery said to the others, after he had gone. "It's been giving that queer rasping call all morning—it's most nerve-racking."

"Yes, isn't it?" agreed Mrs. Nuthatch. "I think this is a trying time of year for older birds, who know their music. Listening to all the young ones learning to sing, I mean. I hear a young Wood Pewee, now, for instance. He keeps repeating 'pee-wee, pee-wee,' but doesn't quite get the hang of it."

"It's certainly irritating to listen to," said Mrs. Robin. "I think we've pretty well cleaned up this tree, now though. Let's hunt for another, shall we, Mrs. Veery?"

POLICE COURT CONTENDS ROAD GOES OVER HIS PROPERTY

John B. Grose, Whitechurch township, was given suspended sentence, placed on probation for one year and was bound over to keep the peace by Magistrate W. F. Woodliffe, in Newmarket police court on Tuesday. Mr. Grose pleaded not guilty to a charge of threatening, which was laid by J. Henry Widdifield, road superintendent of Whitechurch township.

"On the morning of July 26, Floyd Preston, my assistant, and I were operating the road grader on the township road going east," stated Mr. Widdifield. "The road is curved and some trees were blown down on the road between lots 30 and 31, the property of Mrs. Grose," stated Mr. Widdifield. "When we went to remove the trees Mr. Grose came down the road swinging his cane, swore at me and threatened to kill me."

When questioned by Chas. Evans, Bradford, counsel for the defendant, Mr. Widdifield said that Mr. Grose had had trespass signs up.

Mr. Widdifield stated that he could not go back in the afternoon because of other business but he would have gone if he could. He stated that he was not afraid of Mr. Grose, in answer to a query of Mr. Evans.

"Do you think he would hurt you?" asked Mr. Evans.

"He would have pounded me with the cane if he could,"

Floyd Preston verified the evidence of Mr. Widdifield. He stated that as far back as he could remember it had been a township road.

Herbert Pegg, road foreman, said that he had known the road for 45 years, attending the school situated on it, and it had always been a township road.

"Where does the road run?" asked Mr. Mathews.

"Between Mr. Grose's and Mr. McCormack's,"

"How long have you been foreman?"

"Ten years."

When asked if the road had ever been fenced off Mr. Pegg stated that Mr. Grose once put a fence up but it was taken down again soon after.

"Has this road been in use for over 45 years?"

"It is the main road between Uxbridge and Newmarket."

Mr. Pegg said that it was a well travelled highway and nearly everybody used it.

Constable Williamson, township police officer, stated that the reeve asked him to go along in the afternoon. Mr. Grose, he said, ordered them not to touch the tree. "They moved the tree to get the road open," said Mr. Williamson.

When asked if he was in uniform and if he carried his gun with him, Mr. Williamson stated he was in uniform but didn't think he needed a gun. He was not afraid of the defendant, he said.

Mr. Grose said he was 75 years old and had lived in Whitechurch ever since he was four years old.

Mr. Grose stated that the township of Whitechurch had robbed him of his wages and the trees were not over the road at all. He admitted, under Mr. Mathews' questioning, that when he had put a fence up years ago they had taken him to Toronto and locked him up. He stated that he had owned the property for 30 years, it had been in the family for 50 years and that the council had always caused him trouble. He denied the statements made by Mr. Pegg, Mr. Preston and Mr. Widdifield, and said Mr. Pegg tried to run over him when he forbade him to drive over the road.

In suspending sentence Magistrate Woodliffe stated that he thought the accused was quite capable of using violence though it was questionable if he could do any serious injury. There was no need for him to take the law into his own hands, said the magistrate, and he must learn not to interfere with the road workers.

An 18-year-old Toronto youth was remanded one week for sentence on a charge of breaking and entering. Truman pleaded guilty. Constable Hayward stated that on Aug. 2 about 3.30 p.m. he was called to the home of C. J. Harris, King township. He said he found the accused and another juvenile at home and they admitted breaking into Mr. Harris' home, gaining entrance by breaking the screen and the window. Entrance to two other cottages was also gained in the same fashion.

A charge of careless driving laid against Russell Glover, Ravenshoe, on a complaint by David Little, Toronto, was dismissed, and Mr. Little was ordered to pay the costs. The charge arose out of a collision between cars driven by the two men.

Farwell Sermon

Text, John 5:28, "Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in which all that are in the graves shall hear His voice, And shall come forth: they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil to the resurrection of damnation."

Subject: "Two Great Announcements"

"These two announcements were made by Christ to the people of His days as to the future of body and soul," said Dr. McIntyre. "He reveals to them the mysterious fact that the bodies of the just and the unjust should rise from their graves at the resurrection. The just would rise to the resurrection of life and the unjust to the resurrection of judgment. The just need no judgment, for they passed beyond all condemnation when they accepted Christ as a Saviour."

"In this text and in Acts 24:15 we have the only direct declarations of the New Testament of a bodily resurrection of the just and the unjust. In the Old Testament, Daniel 12:2, there is a direct declaration in these words: 'And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life and some to shame and everlasting contempt.' In many other places it is implied that the bodies of the unjust shall rise from the grave at the resurrection, but not definitely stated."

"Let us look at the first announcement: All that are in the graves shall hear His voice. The dead of all nations shall hear His voice. They are now hidden from human view in dust, but not from the eye of God. He will restore their lives and bid them stand before Him as he did Lazarus when He said, 'Come forth.' This is a sublime description and it will be a wonderful display of Almighty power."

"This declaration started Christ's hearers. They looked at Him in amazement as He stood before them in human form bewildered and astonished. They thought that the judgment of the unjust was now. Calmly he said: 'Marvel not at this, the judgment of the unjust is in the future and as far away as the resurrection day."

"Christ was not forming any temporal earthly kingdom as they expected. There was a spiritual agency to run coeval with the world's history. This was the course He was outlining for the human race and when this course was finished, then the resurrection and the judgment."

"This morning I wish to concentrate your thought upon the future. I am fully conscious that the bonds that have united us as pastor and people, for all these years, are soon to be severed forever. The bonds that unite us to the future can never be broken. 'Marvel not at this.' Time and space may separate us here but we are all marching to the grave. We shall meet in eternity."

"We shall rise from our graves at the resurrection day either to eternal life or eternal condemnation. Listen friends and neighbors to my last warning in the words of my Saviour, 'The hour is coming.' You cannot escape it. Why try? Why not prepare to meet your God? If you could only see the grave face of our Saviour that day He uttered these words, and the astonished faces of the Jews as they heard them, you would understand their tremendous significance. The great responsibility of life and living must be faced by every individual soul."

"The second announcement of Christ was: They that have done good unto the resurrection of life and they that have done evil to the resurrection of damnation. These two prospects confront us as we part. Which resurrection shall it be? No living man ever thought within himself that he would rise some day to a resurrection of damnation. The very thought of it would make him a raving maniac, as it did Judas of old."

"Many have found ways of escape from such a resurrection that modifies the prospect. The Jews thought they would escape the condemnatory sentence of God because they were the seed of Abraham. The foolish virgins thought they would escape it, because they made a good appearance of garments and lamps. The people of our day think they will escape because they have done no harm to anyone. Such excuses may satisfy man who does not wish to face the issues of life in time and in eternity but it will not satisfy the Judge. The only thing that will satisfy the Judge is a new creature, or a man recreated in Christ Jesus."

"Christ clearly states that they that have done good shall rise to the resurrection of life. Done good is the condition of future life in heaven. Here Christ is laying emphasis on production. A man's life must show definite production of good in the kingdom of earth before he fulfills the conditions required. That production must be of spiritual and moral quality. It must have its origin in regeneration by the spirit of God. All the activity in production must emanate from that source. The root must be right or the fruit will be wrong."

"Christ said that a good tree cannot produce evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. The apostle James puts it thus: 'For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also.' In other words, a man who believes in God will not believe long until he puts his belief into active practice. He has to keep his faith alive by doing good. Let me impress upon you that God will require at the judgment day what you have done."

"It is said that someone handed Dr. Goforth of China a copy of the life of Robert Murray McChesney when he was a young man and that book gave him a vision that sent him out to the foreign field as a missionary. Thousand upon thousand heard the Gospel message through Goforth and they will rise up not only as the product of Goforth's good works but also of the man that gave him the vision of a better life. Is there any star in your crown? Will some soul bless you on the resurrection morning because you have done him good? From this day forth count the cost of the judgment day."

"In this announcement, Christ also makes it clear that the evil doer shall rise to the resurrection of damnation. Damnation in this connection means the sentence passed by a judge on a man who has not lived a righteous life. The word is used only in connection with the judgment of God on the wicked. The man that has lived an evil life will be raised from his grave to be condemned. 'This is the sole design in raising him from his grave. Evil will not go unpunished. Paul says 'The unjust are reserved unto the day of judgment to be punished.' Matthew says, 'They shall go into everlasting punishment.' and Mark speaks of the punishment as the place where the work dieth not and the fire is not quenched. Let me warn you that the day is coming. It may be nearer than perhaps you think."

"But who is meant by 'they that have done evil'? The evil men are those who have done works without any moral quality. They have left God and their fellow men out of their reckoning. No man can do work to be of permanent service to God or man above his character. The evil may be negative as well as positive. The evil of Judas who betrayed his Lord was positive while the evil of the rich man was negative. He neglected Lazarus at his door. Both these men were condemned and punished. Every time you wink at wrong and use no effort to correct it you are guilty of negative evil. Eli's sons made themselves vile and he restrained them not. He suffered for his neglect."

"During my stay with you I have set before you life and death. I was always conscious that the day was coming when your blood would be required at my hands. I have borne you by night and day before the throne of grace and pleaded with you in public and private to surrender your souls into the hands of God. If I have been over-zealous at times, in thrusting the warning shaft too strongly against your souls, believe me it was done out of love to you."

"I could not bear to see you sliding down asleep to the pit of destruction. My parting prayer is that you and I may meet as redeemed souls around the throne of God to be forever with Himself who gave His life for us."

The water stand-pipe near the high school needs painting. Councillor A. D. Evans, chairman of the water and light committee, told the town council on Tuesday evening. Mr. Evans submitted a tender which he had received from an outside firm of $185 for one coat and $235 for two coats, the town to supply the paint. It was questioned whether a local painter would undertake the job, but on the suggestion of Councillor Frank Bowser it was decided to call for tenders.

ARE WED AT PRETTY
CHURCH SERVICE
A very pretty wedding took place at St. Paul's Anglican church, Newmarket, last Friday, when Norma Elizabeth Armstrong, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Armstrong, Kettleby, became the bride of Earl Victor Thompson, son of Mr. Arthur Thompson and the late Mrs. Thompson, Toronto. Rev. A. J. Patstone officiated at the ceremony.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. J. O. Little, and, during the signing of the register, Miss Velma Thompson, sister of the groom, sang "O Perfect Love."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white lace and net over tulle. Her fingertip veil of silk net was caught to her head by a cluster of gardenias and she carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses.

Miss Muriel Armstrong, sister of the bride, wore a gown of pink net over tulle and carried an old-fashioned nosegay.

Jack Lloyd, Newmarket, acted as best man and the ushers were Wilbert Crane, Kettleby, and Clarence Thompson, brother of the groom.

The reception was held in the parish hall, Kettleby, the bride's mother wearing blue sheer and a corsage of sweetheart roses.

Later the bride and groom left amid showers of good wishes for Muskoka. On their return they will reside in Newmarket.

ACTIVE IN BUSINESS.
MRS. PHILLIPS DIES

A true helpmeet to her husband, carrying on with him jointly their shoe-repair business, during their years of married life, and working in the shop daily, Mrs. E. V. Phillips died Thursday night, after five weeks illness, in her 53rd year.

Rev. Dr. D. McIntyre conducted services at their home on Bolton St. and at Newmarket cemetery on Saturday afternoon. Pallbearers were Loftus Buckley, Ned Buckley, George Close, Tim Skinner, Alfred Smith and Lyle Bond.

Mrs. Phillips was born in King township near Kettleby. Mary Jane Shanks was the daughter of the late Mary Jane West and Thomas Shanks of East Gwillimbury.

On Nov. 15, 1911, she was married to E. V. Phillips of Ravenshoe. They carried on a shoe repair business there and moved to Newmarket 20 years ago.

They subsequently spent five years in Richmond Hill, returning to Newmarket four years ago.

Besides her husband, two brothers survive, Nelson Shanks, Queensville, and Stanley Shanks, Ravenshoe.

Relatives and friends were here from Toronto, Richmond Hill, Sutton, Mount Albert, Ravenshoe and other points for the funeral on Saturday. The great number who paid this last tribute was indicative of Mrs. Phillips' gift for friendship.

A nephew, Ross Phillips, whose home is at Indian Head, Sask., now in training with the R.C.A.F. at St. Thomas, was here for the service.

GEORGE WHYLE GETS CAR
BACK WITHIN FEW HOURS
Quick work on the part of the local police saw George Whyle in possession of his car within a few hours after it had been stolen from in front of his home early Sunday morning.

The car was found on the sharp turn just this side of Sutton, where the thief or thieves had apparently been unable to make the turn, and had gone into the ditch. It was only slightly damaged. A flashlight, coat and a pair of gloves had been stolen from the car.

Chief Constable James Sloss of Newmarket is investigating.

WILL ENTERTAIN OTHER
CLUBS ON LABOR DAY
Newmarket town council made a grant of $50 to the Newmarket tennis club at a meeting on Tuesday evening. Councillor A. D. Evans asked that the grant be conditional on the club deeding to the town land to the east of the present courts, but the grant was made unconditionally.

Newmarket and Aurora tennis courts are to be used for an all-day York-Simcoe tennis tournament on Labor day, N. L. Mathews, K. C., a member of the club, informed the council.

INDIAN PITCHER IS TOUGH ON REDMEN
A senior softball club from St. Catharines, last year's Ontario finalists, defeated the Newmarket Redmen at the fair grounds Saturday night by a score of 10-5.

Newmarket lacked the services of Alex. Webster and Wes Niles, of the pitching staff, Burkholder, regular catcher to Glover, and Bob Peters, regular first baseman.

The St. Catharines boys, who all played for or against Charlie Holmes when he was in St. Kitt's, came to Newmarket as a good-will gesture to the new manager of the Redmen.

They spent the weekend here as guests of the Newmarket players. On Saturday evening after the game their hosts took them up to Lake Simcoe.

The St. Catharines boys are expecting a return visit on Aug. 31, when the Newmarketers will see a hardball play-off game in the afternoon, play their hosts in the evening at 7 o'clock, and at 9 o'clock attend the senior lacrosse game between Orillia and St. Catharines, and afterward go to Niagara Falls to see the illuminated falls. The Redmen will spend the weekend in St. Catharines, visiting on Sunday the Welland ship canal and Niagara-on-the-Lake, taking a drive along the river, and leaving in the afternoon for home.

The St. Catharines club appeared here in fancy dress costume, with a hardball uniform of trousers, stockings, silk shirts and black windbreakers.

They brought three pitchers and, for the benefit of the Newmarket clouters, used all three. Most outstanding was Pollock, an Indian, in his 40th year, 24th season of pitching softball. With his curves, drops and slow-balls he was a treat to watch.

Pollock holds a record of 24 strike-outs of 27 men to face him, achieved when he was in his prime. Charlie Holmes' brother, "Clam," caught Pollock for 20 years, and they were for many years St. Catharines' smartest battery. This battery took an Ontario championship from Newmarket's Alex. Webster, pitching for Oshawa, in 1937.

St. Catharines' big inning was the second when they scored four runs. They added two in the fourth, two in the fifth, one in the sixth and one in the seventh. Newmarket bays got their runs in the third, sixth and eighth.

PLAY-OFF IS
15-0 FIASCO
By RALPH M. ADAMS
Battering the offerings of Joint McComb for 16 hits and 13 runs in the first of the play-offs, the Newmarket Redmen easily outclassed the Aurora clan Thursday night. Wes Niles, on the mound for Newmarket, hurled steadily to let the southerners down with four blows, while he was accorded perfect support in the field.

From the Aurora point of view the fifth inning may be rightly called the "fatal fifth." In this canto the red dynamiters blasted McComb for seven hits and seven runs, including home runs by Gibney and Niles and a triple contributed by Bob Peters, while VanZant added a wholesome double for good measure.

After this outburst the Aurorans started to stall, hoping to get the game called because of darkness and the old verbal battle was on. At one time Niles and McComb looked as though they might start a donnybrook but their team-mates hauled them away.

The Scoring—And How!
Both teams had a barren first inning but the reds scored in their half of the second when Cain doubled to open the inning and was sacrificed around. Again in the fourth the Redmen went after Joint to tally three counters, Luck starting the fireworks with a sweet double. Cain followed with a single. Luck going to third to score on a wild pitch. Peters walked. VanZant went out and Trivett walked. Cain scoring in the meantime.

Niles punched out a single to score Trivett and got caught at third himself. Giles passed away to end the rally. Aurora, at this stage, could begin to see the old game going, as they couldn't touch Niles and the score read 4-0.

"Fateful Fifth"
Newmarket's big splash came in the fifth when they really put the spurs to McComb, and the ex-Newmarketer didn't take to the ride they handed him. Hilton opened the obsequies with a single and took second on a wild pitch. Gibney smashed out four sacks to score the shortstopper ahead of him.

Luck went out, Hodgins to McKenzie. Cain singled for his third hit, Peters came through with a triple to right, scoring Cain. VanZant doubled to score Peters and Trivett followed with a single to bring Van home, taking third himself on two successive wild pitches.

Niles, continuing the attack, homered through the race-track gate, scoring Trivett ahead of him. That ended the scoring for the time.

Again in the sixth Newmarket went after the Aurorans. Luck singled to start the affair and Cain doubled to score Luck. Peters got on, through Patender's error, VanZant struck out. Trivett singled to score Peters. Niles got on, through an error. Giles flied to White but Hilton singled to score Trivett and Gibney struck out to end the inning.

This was the last scoring and the coat of kashmir read 15 to 0 in favor of the homesters.

Both teams didn't do the game a bit of good with their consistent juggling and by the end of the piece the fans were thoroughly fed up with the display. Apparently both benches blame the umpires for not making the teams play ball when the stalling occurred. However, it is the opinion of this writer that the league officials have only themselves to blame for appointing two local officials instead of bringing in two outside men that the squads wouldn't try to take advantage of. The sooner the umpires rule with an iron hand and put the first chronic kicker out of the game the better.

JUNIOR FARMERS WILL DANCE AT MUSSELMAN'S
At a meeting in Newmarket held last Thursday, York County Junior farmers decided unanimously to accept the offer of George Davies of Musselman's Lake, to donate the Cedar Beach pavilion and orchestra for a dance, for the Junior Farmers' ambulance fund on Monday, Aug. 10.

St. Catharines' big inning was the second when they scored four runs. They added two in the fourth, two in the fifth, one in the sixth and one in the seventh. Newmarket bays got their runs in the third, sixth and eighth.

HEADLINES IN THE "SUN"

By ARCHIE JOSCELYN

"No more news today, young man. Nothing at all!"

Lem Travis' good-natured blue eyes narrowed a little. Lem was not looking for news, and McCarty should have known that as well as he did. This was the last of fair week, Saturday afternoon, and Lem had sent in his last stories to the afternoon edition of the Sun an hour ago. Now he had stepped into the cool recesses of the Administration building merely to escape the big closing-day crowd for a moment.

Every other building was crowded; but this, where only business was conducted, was more quiet than usual. The clerks seemed to have stopped work and left, which was queer. Only McCarty was in sight. He was big, bluff, with narrowed eyes that Lem did not exactly like. Queer that McCarty would be staying!

Before Lem could reply, a room door opened and Sam Dodson hurried out, his rather fat face wreathed in smiles, his voice jovial too jovial.

"Oh, hello, Lem," he greeted heartily. "I was just wishing you'd drop in. I wanted to see you. It's all right, Bill," to the now scowling McCarty. "I wanted to see Lem on some business. Come on up to my office, will you?"

He turned and led the way to the stairs, explaining that the elevator was not running, since more of the clerks had been given the afternoon off. Lem thought quickly and followed. Something was strange here, decidedly so. His instinct as a newspaperman was aroused. He would see what it was all about, since he was this far in it.

McCarty was following behind, and Lem shrewdly suspected that he would not be permitted to leave if he tried. He might call for help, but with "barkers" from the booths, a calliope playing somewhere, and the shouts of a big crowd bent on holiday, probably nobody would hear or heed.

His own ears were sharply attuned, however, and he heard a muffled groan. A quick glance showed him where it came from, a storeroom on the second floor. All that was visible, above the ordinary litter of stuff, was a pair of tan shoes; but Lem had seen enough to guess the rest.

Those shoes belonged to Bedford, fair commissioner. He was, very plainly, lying bound and gagged. Probably one or two other officials were in a like state. Dodson, chief clerk in Bedford's absence, was decidedly up to something, with McCarty aiding him.

Dodson seemed a little uneasy as he moved on toward the next flight of stairs. Lem did not act as though he had seen or heard anything. McCarty, close behind, breathed hard. Lem was sure that one false move would put him in the same fix as Bedford.

On the fourth, and top floor, Dodson led the way into an office and sank into a chair, puffing. He mopped his face and motioned to another, McCarty was lurking in the next room, guarding the only possible exit.

"You've been on the Sun for two years now, haven't you, Lem?" asked Dodson with false geniality. "You sure know how to write up stuff. You know, there may be an opening for some publicity work for next season's fair, pretty soon. I thought you might be interested."

"It's possible," agreed Lem. He was also remembering two packed suitcases, reposing in the hall outside. Dodson and McCarty were scheduled, he knew, to go up in an aeroplane at five o'clock, apparently to take views of the fair. They probably had the day's gate receipts in those bags, a tidy sum of money. Once up, they would not plan on coming down again; well, not right away, at least.

"I'll deal with scenic and natural wonders of the state," Dodson went on. "Let's do a little figuring." He caught up a piece of paper, pulled out a pencil, the head of which snapped off short. Impatiently he flung it out of the half-opened window, searched his pockets, then turned to Lem to borrow his. A moment later he stuck the pencil in his own pocket and arose. It had been just a ruse to get Lem's pencil of course.

"I'm sure it will interest you," declared Dodson. "If you'll excuse me a few minutes, I'll get some things for you to look over, and then we'll have a talk. Here's the Sun, if you want to look at it."

Lem pretended to be absorbed in the paper, and shielded behind it, he watched, with the aid of a small mirror on a wall, Dodson and McCarty, in the next room. They were watching him and arguing violently but low-toned. Through the window came the noises of the fair in a solid wave of sound. In the same room with Lem, Dodson had been compelled to raise his voice. Now, in the next room, the men had no suspicion that they could be overheard.

"Best thing is to tie him up with the others," McCarty was saying, his words rasping angrily. "He'll get suspicious, otherwise, I'd have had him shoed off in a minute if you'd left him alone."

"And had him suspicious there, and coming back," Dodson protested nervously. "I thought it best to have him in here, but there is no need to be drastic, McCarty. I'll handle this reporter so that he won't suspect anything, till five o'clock. Then we'll excuse ourselves and go, and everything will be all right."

"I still think the other way'd be safer."

"Safer? How? Even if he got wise, we could tie him up then. He can't do anything, up here. I've got his pencil so that he can't write. Their words confirmed his suspicions. These men were aiming to make a neat get-away with something that did not belong to them, that was sure -- and their doing so would serve to put Bedford, the commissioner, in bad. Bedford was his friend.

Lem arose and strolled casually to the window, glanced down at the swarming crowd below. If he could get word to them, all would be well; but any careless attempt to signal would lose him his freedom. Dodson had contrived so that he could not even write a note and drop it.

Here was news, such as would have gladdened the heart of any of the men on the Sun. It was breaking right under the nose of the youngest staff member, and he was apparently helpless to do anything about it. If he played his part, he could walk out of the building when Dodson and McCarty went for their ride, and tell what he knew after they were in the air.

While that mean safety for himself, it would probably mean escape for them, with darkness not far off, after they had a good start. It was a risk, anyway. In any case, other papers would have the news as quickly as his own. Somehow, he must get this news to the Sun, get it out while it was an exclusive feature. That mattered above all else at the moment.

He had heard a few more words, enough to tell him that his first guess was correct. These gate receipts were not insured. Bedford was personally responsible for the money until it was banked.

Dodson now re-entered the room with a handful of pamphlets. "Here we are," he announced, and sank into a chair. "You can look these over, and get some idea of the scope of the work. Of course, there would be some research necessary in preparing much of the material, which would take time. Study it over a while, and then, before you go, we'll talk it over. You're through work for the day aren't you?"

"All through," nodded Lem.

Dodson sighed in relief. "Fine," he said, and presently bustled out of the room again. A glance into the little mirror showed that McCarty was where he could watch closely, however, though he now appeared to be reading a copy of the Sun. Lem studied him a moment, and suddenly his lips twitched in a faint grin.

He spread open his own copy of the Sun. Here was a chance, which even the watchful McCarty would not suspect. Outside, the crowd was boisterous, bands blaring. A perfect bedlam of sound floated in at the open window.

Lem glanced rapidly over the headlines on the front page. Several of them, dealing with the fair, were headings of articles that he had written himself that morning.

"Dodson Says Best Fair in Years," "Manager McCarty Praises High Class of Exhibits," "Big Take at Gate Assured," "Fair Profit for Year," "Receipts $50,000 for last Day," "Administration Building Is Busiest Place on Grounds," "Joyce Roberts' Revue Will Take to the Air at Five." Other heads were there as well, telling of police news from other cities, and so on.

Lem folded the front page to the inside, drew out a penknife, and began clipping out portions of different heads. If he could only put it over! He had to!

Presently, still screened behind the open paper, he arranged his clippings one below the other, in sequence, and studied them.

"Dodson and Manager McCarty, big take, $5,000 for last day, administration building, take to air at five, Canadian border, bandits make get-away, Commissioner Bedford, held prisoner in heart of city; surprising tale of intrigue is unfolded. Police respond quickly when trouble call comes."

"A few pieces of headlines put together sure tell the story," Lem grinned. "Who needs a pencil, anyway?" He needed his own signature at the end; however, he managed to prick it in with the point of his penknife. He took a few clippings from the classified columns and other parts of the paper.

The message was written. If he could get it delivered, he had few fears of the result.

He tossed the Sun, still folded to hide its mutilation, on the floor, and pretended to be absorbed in the pamphlets which Dodson had given him. Presently he crossed to the desk, spread them out, and while studying, found a few paper clips and a small pile of blank envelopes. He spread a pamphlet over an envelope, propped another open as a shield, and with clips fastened the address on the envelope.

"Deliver to Sun, $10 Reward. Be Prompt." That message was all from the classified columns. With another clip he fastened the real message in proper order, slipped it inside, sealed the envelope and put it inside a pamphlet as Dodson re-entered the room.

As he talked, Lem sauntered to the window. Still holding the pamphlet in his hand, his back to the window, he allowed the envelope to slip out and down to the crowd below. Out of the corner of his eye he saw a boy rush to pick it up, study it a moment, then hurry away at top speed. Lem smothered a grin.

Ten minutes past four! He had to wait, to play up to Dodson, appear to be interested. The boy should get the letter to the Sun in fifteen minutes. That would leave them plenty of time to act.

Ten minutes of five Dodson arose, and McCarty re-entered the room. They invited Lem to accompany them as far as the waiting aeroplane. With their heavy grips in each hand, they were almost at the door, and Lem was beginning to grow anxious when four policemen and Roberts, the city editor, appeared. Dodson paled, but McCarty accepted his capture with fatalism.

Lem dashed back up the first flight of stairs, was down again, two minutes later, with Bedford. Across the street he noticed Jim Fish, another Sun reporter. Jim was already dashing into a telephone booth.

Ten minutes had not passed before the suitcases had been examined and Bedford had told his story. By that time the police were ready to depart with their prisoners. They paused at the door as newsboys began frantically shouting an extra of the Sun, flaunted one in their faces, telling the story of all that had just happened. McCarty snatched a paper and studied it a moment, where the full story was given in detail. He turned, scowling, on Lem.

"I knew the only safe way would be to tie you up, too, at the start," he snarled. "You're altogether too clever. I know you're responsible for the whole thing, though I don't know how, yet. But what I can't understand is, how the story is on the streets almost as soon as we're caught, even?"

"Oh, that was simple," grinned Lem. "The boys at the office got it all on the presses, ready to go, on my say-so. They waited until the moment you were actually arrested and the facts proven, to be sure there was no mistake, but that fact was phoned in at once, and the presses went to rolling the paper out. All simple enough, just the usual line of duty."

By RALPH M.
ADAMS

By the looks of the kalsomein, the Aurora "collegian-slavers" had another off-nite against their old jinx, last Thursday.

The Simmons' squad seem to do all right against Cousse and company from the north, but just fold up when the Redmen take the field.

It really amazes yours truly, Aurora make Barrie look soft while Newmarket has to scrape to tie the collegians, while they have a comparatively soft nite when the Aurorans are the opposition.

Thursday nite an otherwise smart struggle was soured with all the verbal scraps and threats of physical scraps.

Both teams, I suppose, were in wrong to some degree, but the Aurorans made a fizzle trying to delay the game so they could get the old "called on account of darkness" speech.

One funny incident was a member of the Aurora squad accusing a Newmarket of stalling, but the latter had the right answer, "Sure, we should stall, shouldn't we. We're only 15 runs up."

I can't figure why Simmons let McComb take the pounding he did, with two other hurlers on his squad.

However, these two hurlers were conspicuous by their absence, so the ex-local boy just had to stay on the mound and take it.

Wes Niles, hurling four-hit ball for the Reds, held the Aurorans in the hollow of his hand throughout the game.

Herbie Cain was the big noise of the attack, garnering four hits in as many appearances, and fielded perfectly. This was Herbie's best game of the season.

Barrie and Richmond Hill, with a victory each (in the other's home park), will attempt to settle their differences tonight.

Right now, I think the finals will bring the Redmen and the Hillers together, unless something drastic happens in the Barrie-Richmond Hill game.

Condolences from this column to Nugget Shore, of the Aurora squad, who suffered the loss of his father this week.

The Goldshirts lost out in the Goodwood Civic Holiday tournament to Thornhill.

After eliminating the buglers the Davis Leather boys took it on the chin Tuesday nite, when the Specialty lads nailed them in the first of the round-robin series 13-2.

Sons of England will be much stronger next week when five of their regulars return from militia camp.

On the season's record it looks as though Doonan's Sons of England are the gang to take for the silverware.

Along the grapevine . . . Herbie Cain signed with the Toronto Scottish this week . . . a number of other pro peckchaser will be his camp mates . . .

Received a card from Hughie Mair at Camp Niagara . . . He says this a.m. stuff is all right after you get used to it . . . POT POURRI

By GOLDEN GLOW

I have so many things I want to write about that I have to again head it Pot Pourri, like I did last week, all little things that have come to my notice, about gardens, and flowers, and birds and "beasts" (would you call a beaver a beast?) Now where shall I start?

Perhaps I'd better tell about the bird flying around downtown the Saturday evening of the perennial flower show, flying around down to get up above the plate of lights. We saw it several times, flying low, then it would light on the top of a motor-car only to have some young chap try to catch it. It did seem so weary!

Then I saw that it had come down or had been caught, and I stood watching as it sat quietly in the arms of a young man, eating wheat that a boy held in his cupped hands for it. The young man holding it saw me and said it had come down right on his head, and it was so tired. He said he was taking it home and would keep it in his garage that night.

And as I went home I met him going back and he said it had settled quietly down to rest, after taking a drink of water. Then I met him on Sunday and he said that when he opened the garage door it flew out, circled three times overhead, and then went off in a perfectly straight line on a swift flight somewhere. It has been a carrier pigeon! Wouldn't you love to know where it came from and where it was going? But we shall never know!

We have been having great fun with our squirrels around my home. They are so tame that they will come right up and eat out of your hand if you have time to spare to do a bit of coaxing. Some visitors to our neighborhood from northern Ontario were greatly interested in their antics, and got several snapshots to show the "folks back home."

Yesterday I saw the lovely grey squirrel, with the big bushy tail, running along the fence with a whole slice of bread in its mouth, and it ran up the tree, too, with the bread in its mouth. They scurry back and forth along the wires overhead to get where they want to go. Of course the dogs chase them, and then we chase the dogs! When you hear the birds making a lot of fuss, you know Mr. Squirrel is busy — the birds and the squirrels are always at daggers drawn.

My neighbor was so amused the other day. She put a cookie out for the squirrel and about a dozen sparrows lined up on the clothesline and protested noisily, but Mr. Squirrel just sat up in our empty flower-pot and proceeded to eat his cookie right under their noses! Everyone in our neighborhood takes fun out of the squirrels.

But what amazes me is to go downtown and see the lovely purple martins, back in their usual haunts on Main St. They never seem to notice the heavy traffic but sing away their delightful throaty song as if nobody was near. Isn't it queer how they haunt the same place year after year. They say if you can once persuade the purple martins to come and live at your place, you have them for life. When I was a small child my Aunt Elizabeth Dixon used to have them year after year. Uncle James had built her a martin-house and you could count on their return as regular as the seasons.

By the way, watch for the evening star, Venus, any time after sunset in the western sky. It is particularly brilliant and worth watching, and the "Milky Way" shows up more plainly this month, and the shower of stars occurs annually in August. We shall soon be having cooler nights and will see once again the beautiful Aurora Borealis, wonderful northern lights. Won't our six Newmarket soldier-boys up in the far north get a wonderful view of them? I will never forget how beautiful they were when I was in B.C. for it is considerably farther north than Newmarket. There is something fascinating about the northern lights.

I used to think it was great, when we had horse delivery in our town, when the owner would see to it that, just as the farmer puts a rhubarb leaf in his straw-bale, his horse was provided with a sun-bonnet, in the scorching hot days like the ones we have just come through, and kind-hearted housewives would provide pails of water for both horse and dog.

And I saw under a pump the other day a huge galvanized iron tub, and in it a floating block, and the "chateleine" of that garden told me it was for the birds to stand on to get a drink. And I saw them do it too, with my own eyes. Wasn't that a kind, thoughtful gesture? And one of our neighbors has a dog with thick white hair, (should I say fur?), so had it clipped, leaving only a tassel on the end of its tail, and is that little dog pleased?

How cute the little girls look with their hair in two plaits, like old times — but they used to call them pig-tails then. Little girls and little boys in their cool sun-suits and barefoot sandals!

I was talking to a neighbor the other day when their handsome Persian cat came round the corner of the verandah, and she told me how dainty it is in its eating. She said she knew of one Persian cat that would eat only canned peas. Their cat just wanted the dog and cat food you buy in tins.

Speaking of cats, there was somebody's poor cat around my neighbor's garden with a rope tied tightly round its neck — luckily she was able to catch it, and cut away the rope, but it was so tight she had quite a difficult time. What a cruel thing to do to any creature! As bad as putting out a salmon tin not cleaned out, or burned out, and some poor cat getting its head caught inside.

But, I said "beasts" as well as birds and flowers, and would you call a beaver a beast? It was in a letter from Muskoka that I heard of the beavers. They had made a home under a boathouse, over which there were bedrooms, and at night they used to hear the baby bawling, crying. But yesterday I had another letter and the beavers have departed; but a mother wild duck with her family of ducklings was still swimming around in their protected part of the lake, while a partridge with her covey were in the woods behind the cottage. Also Jimmy Skunk, who last summer used to make raids on the garbage can, was back on the job.

They told also about the loons that hugh every evening; out on the lake. (The expression "crazy as a loon" can be understood better if you have ever heard that queer water-fowl laughing at nothing!)

But I can't end this without a word about the beautiful gardens around town, for now different flowers are blooming. The shasta daisy and climbing; roses in particular, the golden glow, and the perennial phlox and the monarda, and the lovely purple clematis and garden hyacinths, besides all the beautiful annuals, petunias, snap-dragon, French marigolds, zinnias and a host of others.

But if you want to see something, you won't see every day, no, nor every year either, have a look at Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Sawdon's yucca at the front of their home on Timothy St., in the corner of the verandah. It stands over seven feet, straight as can be, up from its stiff leaves, shaped something like orange-ly leaves, only stiffer. The flower stem stands straight up, covered with beautiful creamy white bells, and it has lateral branches all covered with flowers as well. All flowers from the bottom to the top, no more leaves. It is a marvel, and they have a lovely white oleander in flower further back in their lovely garden.

And I made another discovery, as well, for what I took to be another big elm tree, like the one in the front of their place — the elm, the famous Newmarket landmark — but this one stands behind Dr. Richardson's, the old Caldwell homestead, and Mr. Sawdon told me it wasn't an elm, but an oak, grown from an acorn planted by Mr. Caldwell, dear knows how many years ago.

It is a magnificent tree. Just take a good look at it as well, and be proud that our dear old town has more treasures than we know, for an oak tree of that size and age is surely something we all can be proud to boast of our town possessing. Newmarket has some splendid trees and they add wonderfully to the beauty of our town. It looks so attractive from up on Prospect Ave. south, just where you come to the corner, by "Figgie Lane," from where you can look right up Main St.

Checking Up

It was a dark and stormy night when the weary husband returned home.

"I've been to every shop in town and they can't match that bit of ribbon for you anywhere, dear," he said to his wife.

"Splendid!" she cried. "I just wanted to make sure that it really was unique."

AURORA DOTOR'S WIFE RETURNS FROM FOODS COURSE

"I found the course most beneficial and an eye-opener on food values," Mrs. C. R. Boulding told The Era in discussing her recent month's course at O.A.C. on "way nutrition." There were over 150 ladies from all parts of Ontario who took the course, all at their own personal expense.

Mrs. Boulding was the representative of the Aurora Red Cross branch, and with the exception of Miss I. Ramer of Richmond Hill and Mrs. T. Birkett of Stouffville, no other branches in North York were represented. Lectures were from 9 a.m. until 4:30 each day, with the regular staff of the Agricultural college supplemented by such notables as Drs. Alan Brown, F. F. Tisdall, J. H. Ebbs, Stewart Thompson and J. D. Griffin, all of Toronto.

"We were given menus to prepare each day, in addition to the lectures, with 20 persons to a kitchen," said Mrs. Boulding. "The food was excellent and the menus were planned to give the most nutrition possible for the lowest price possible. For a family of four, three meals a day, which could not be surpassed for food value, were provided for a week at $7.25, or 26 cents per person a day."

"We were urged to buy entirely Canadian products and were shown uses and ways of preparing different Canadian products which are plentiful, not known to the average housewife. The whole idea behind the course was to prevent waste of food-stuffs, and the proper storing of foods was included in the course."

"The canning of fruit was a timely project, which was urged, but we were discouraged from attempting to can vegetables, as those in charge thought the home lacked the proper facilities for doing a thorough job."

"Diets and full menus for all sizes of families were planned. Courses were also given at the same time in ambulance driving, child care, refugee work, and home nursing to other groups."

Conversation with representatives of the various Red Cross branches represented led Mrs. Boulding to believe that Aurora was in the forefront in the work done, and the funds raised proportionally. In the fall Mrs. Boulding, in conjunction with the local branch of the Red Cross, will conduct small study groups on the course.

SOFTBALL GIRLS ESCAPE INJURY WHEN CAR HIT

Returning from playing a ball game at Brockington on Monday evening, four Newmarket softball girls escaped serious injury when their car, owned by the Davis Leather Co. travelling north, and a car travelling north, collided. The front end of the Davis car hit the right front fender of the other car, which also had a wheel broken. The front end of the Davis car was smashed.

George Close, riding in the front seat beside the driver, Lloyd Smith, hit his head on the windshield. Jerry Germain, also in the front seat, was unhurt.

The girls in the car, Mary Raymond, Mrs. Deane, Lois Manning and Mae Brown, were all badly shaken but were uninjured.

SPECIALTY TAKES FIRST PLAY-OFF

By JACK PEPPLATT

Town league hardball entered the play-off stage Friday night when the Office Specialty scattered the remnants of a once fast bugle band nine, scoring 14 runs to 3.

Bas. McHale, manager of the buglers, relieved Lusted on the mound half-way through the game and pitched his heart out in an effort to stem the tide that was sweeping his team from further contention in 1940 hardball. However, all the willies that Bas. could command meant little to the office boys who had their batting eyes on razor-sharp edge.

Pete Kaus, flinging for the Specialty, felt that this was a night that he could depend on certain backing from his comrades and he was shooting the fast ones with all the confidence in the world. The buglers, some of whom were just a little peeved with the way the game was turning out, didn't perform as a unit, and early lost confidence.

The bugle band scored two runs in the first half of the first while Office Specialty replied with four of the same order. Wright and Dobbie snared the band runs and Bert Ennis, Craddock, Neufeldt and Murray Boyd came in for the Specialty. The Office Specialty went through their whole batting order in this inning.

The buglers got their last run of the game in the second when Dobbie counted his second of the evening. In the third, the Specialty chalked up another via the effort of Murray Boyd.

The fourth was another big inning for Office Specialty. Ben Wilson knocked in Bert Ennis, who had walked. Craddock also came in on Wilson's bingle and Neufeldt, Boyd, J. Ennis and Jack O'Halloran completed the scoring. By way of repetition, the Office Specialty went through their whole batting order in this inning.

Bert Ennis, Craddock and O'Halloran got the last three Specialty bingles in the fifth when, by way of re-repetition, the office boys went through their whole batting order again for the third time in the game.

The best blow of the evening was a triple by Murray Boyd in the third inning that whistled along the right field base-line.

The Specialty comrades-in-arms performed like a bunch of all-stars and to pick out an individual performance for the spotlight would be taking an awful chance. Suffice it to say, that for stars, just read down the entire Specialty line-up.

Now, the Office Specialty enters a round-robin series, with the Sons of England and Davis Leather, which will decide the top array in the town loop. It will be worth an ace in your amusement pack to take a gander at these play-off contests; they will be worth your while while.

Bugle Band: F. Boyd, Wright, Dobbie, Gunn, Rudbeck, Eakins, McHale, Andrews, Lusted.

Office Specialty: B. Ennis, Craddock, Kaus, Wilson, Neufeldt, Boyd, Hooper, J. Ennis, O'Halloran.
